ST730	Ronald McDonald House Charities of Central and Northern Arizona	www.rmhccnaz.org	For over 35 years, Ronald McDonald House Charities of Central and Northern Arizona (RMHCCNAZ) has been a welcoming "home-away-from-home" in the Valley for families with children facing medical challenges, providing an atmosphere of comfort, hope and courage. When your child is sick, you want the best care possible, no matter how far away from home. Our three Valley Houses serve as an inviting refuge for families who have no choice but to travel to metropolitan Phoenix for pediatric healthcare. Known as the "House that love built," Ronald McDonald House® provides safe and comforting environments at no cost to families as they manage the challenges of caring for their sick or injured child. Serious pediatric health issues do not wait for a pandemic to end. With so much to worry about, the last thing a family with an ill or injured child should have to worry about is where to find shelter while they are displaced from their home community. RMHCCNAZ remains open and allows families to seek medical treatment for their children without worrying about the cost of housing, meals, and other daily essentials. With the advent of COVID-19, we have had to shift operations. We continue to work closely with social work teams to determine those families who are most in need of our services. Babies in the NICU, children in the PICU, cancer and cardiac patients, and those who require longer term care are those we see most often referred to us. But our mission remains steadfast and clear – we provide a "home-away-from-home" for these families – no matter what.	Statewide (Arizona) only

ST353	Mercy Medical Angels	www.mercymedical.org	In late April, as coronavirus cases spiked and air travel virtually ceased nationwide, an infant lay in a Florida hospital bed awaiting critical brain surgery. Meanwhile, in Baltimore, one of the nation's top neurosurgeons was desperate to get to her, and then back to Baltimore the next day for another critical surgery. The problem seemed intractable to Dr. Allan J Belzberg, Director of Peripheral Nerve Surgery at The Johns Hopkins Hospital, who was determined to help both of his patients despite the constraints of the virus shutdowns. Half of the problem was solved when he was able to book a commercial flight to Tampa. "But the return was constantly being cancelled and changed," he later recalled. Desperately searching the internet for an answer, Belzberg found Mercy Medical Angels where President and CEO Robb Alpaugh answered the call. At the time, the charity's 500 volunteer pilots were all but grounded due to COVID-19 safety concerns, and the request was unusual given MMA's mission to get patients to their doctors, not the other way around. Alpaugh knew that it was time to pivot. He spent hours on the phone that day searching for a willing pilot with an airplane large enough for social distancing. Longtime MMA volunteer pilot Kenny Painter answered the call and agreed to meet the doctor in Florida following his operation on the infant and then fly him back to Baltimore on his spacious Socata TBM 850 airplane. "The Angel Flight got me home the same day, able to get a good night sleep and back in the operating room at Hopkins the next morning," Dr. Belzberg wrote in a thank you note. "Ken was a treat. Beautiful plane, and an amazing pilot. Great combination." But most importantly, "There is a 10-month-old in St. Petersburg recovering from surgery, now with repaired nerves and a functioning arm," he said. "The parents were getting truly desperate, but can go back to just plain loving their child. The generosity of Angel Flight and Mercy Medical allowed this to happen." The doctor-to-the-patient mission is just one example of how MMA has nimbly navigated new challenges in 2020. The charity has also turned its focus offering to transport plasma and organs and doctors.	National only
